Head of city sewage plant leaves as problems at facility continue

■ State will address continuing violations of West Sac sewage plant during Oct. 27 meeting

By Steve Marschke

In the first major personnel change since procedures at the West Sacramento sewage treatment plant became controversial more than a year ago, the superintendent of that plant ceased working there on Friday afternoon. He had been the plant's superintendent, reporting to the director of public works, for about three years.

The circumstances were unclear, and it was not apparent on Tuesday whether superintendent Dale Klever resigned his position or was forced out. Klever did not return a message left at his home Tuesday evening.

City manager Joe Goeden could not be reached for comment Tuesday. Both Mayor Cindy Tuttle and City Councilman Greg Potnick said they were unaware that Klever had left, and did not know about the circumstances of Klever's departure.

Klever was a key figure in the investigations of the West Sacramento plant by the state Environmental Protection Agency which concluded earlier this year without action by the EPA. He was also personally named, along with the City of Housing almost finished

■ Residents chosen by lottery and interview for 50-unit low income project

By Steve Marschke

Work is nearly complete on the West Capitol Courtyard project, the pioneer affordable housing project sponsored by a new non profit development corporation.

Designed to help West Sacramento meet its mandated goals to maintain affordable housing, West Capitol Courtyards is sponsored by the new West Sacramento Housing Development Corporation, which has a local board of directors and works in tandem with the city's redevelopment agency.

The development, being built by the Read Corporation, fronts the southern side of West Capitol Avenue just east of Harbor Blvd. The building fronting the street is expected to host retail uses along the ground floor, and apartment flats above.

Behind it is a group of 40 2- and 3-bedroom townhouses clustered around a courtyard with a playground. The property will be managed by the John Stewart Co., which, according to Tom Kigar of the West Sacramento Housing Development Corp., already manages 5,000 other affordable housing units throughout the region.

"There will be an on-site manager who will live here, and a full-time maintenance person," explained Kigar.

The management company can be replaced with 30 days notice, he added. And Kigar hopes that troublemakers among the tenants will be few and far between.

"We've had such demand for the units (245 applicants for the 50 units) that we think people are going to be proud to live here," he said, "and they're going to adhere to the rules."

Eviction procedures will be the "same as in any market-rate property," he said.

Inside, the units look just like any other mid-range rentals. The townhouses have refrigerators, gas ranges, microwaves and dishwashers, and cover two stories. Floors are linoleum and carpets. The windows are energy efficient -- earning a $100,000 rebate from PG&E, said Kigar.

Applicants were required to meet certain income standards, and must not make more than 60% of the area's median income. A family of four cannot make more than $25,860 and still qualify for the units; a single person cannot make more than $18,120.

Rents vary from $341 per month for a one bedroom unit to $465 per month for a three-bedroom, two-bath townhouse.

Kigar said he does not yet have firm commitments to lease out any of the 5,388 square feet of retail space on the first floor of the front building.

"We've been talking to a deli operator and a laundry facility. We even have the possibility of a city office here."

Total costs of the project reached $6.8 million, including infrastructure. $1 million was contributed in federal funds from HUD, and investors purchased another $2.4 million in tax credits to support the project. The rest of the tab was picked up by the West Sacramento Redevelopment Agency.

About 81 per cent of the people who applied for residency at West Capitol Courtyards were West Sacramento residents, said Kigar, and "we limited our recruitment effort to West Sacramento, when possible."

Verdict from Chamber executive:

Annual parade a success

Sunday's West Sacramento Community Day Parade and surrounding festivities were the best ever for the annual event, said Steve Roberts, executive director of the West Sacramento Chamber of Commerce.

"I think that this was the best event we've ever been involved in," commented Roberts. "It was a good feeling about West Sacramento. Attendance was up -- I think this was the best attendance since I've been here, since 1979."

Among the most popular parade events were the Sierra Outlaws (a Western gunfighter show group), a number of equestrian entries, and participants from local schools. Jesse Orta of the Chamber of Commerce performed as master of ceremonies. Locally born boxer Willie Jorrin was the grand marshal, and

Roberts said one of the best things about this year's parade was the schools' involvement.

"The school district participated better than it ever has participated," he stated. "This year, every school was here. I was really pleased with (superintendent) Dave Miller for encouraging all his schools to be there.

The parade ended near the intersection of West Capitol Ave. and Jefferson Blvd., and the annual Health and Safety Day events and Heritage Festival booths (which included food, crafts and information centers) were set up for the public to visit at the southeast corner of that intersection, near "La Bou" and other area shops.

Even the weather held up nicely, said Roberts.

"It was Chamber of Commerce weather," he joked.

Evergreen Elementary students had a message for spectators. All of the Washington Unified School District schools participated in Sunday's parade.

Spectators lined up along West Capitol Ave. to enjoy the parade, which included marching bands, mounted riders, antique cars, campaigning politicians and more.

Gathering out of hand, four visitors are arrested

By Steve Marschke

Security guards called the West Sacramento Police Department, and the police department asked for help from the California Highway Patrol and Yolo County Sheriff's Department after a social function in Broderick got out of hand Saturday night.

Four Yuba City men were arrested for "delaying a police officer" after they refused to leave the scene.

According to Lt. Ron Moore of the W.S.P.D., a soccer-related organization rented the Holy Cross Hall on Anna Street Saturday for a fundraiser to raise money to send money to their native India. The group has held the event previously without incident, and advertised throughout the Central Valley.

Alcohol contributed to a disturbance, which included broken windows and minor injuries.

"They had four security guards, but we had to assist them, and we required other assistance," said Moore. "The four arrests were representative of many people doing things."

New cop car colors:

And if they missed it, they sure got a first-hand view of the squad cars' new paint scheme during Sunday's annual Community Day Parade.

After a brief controversy, the police department has settled on a new black-and-white color

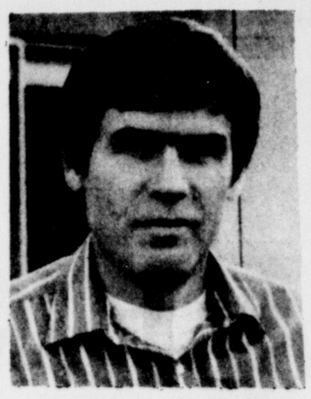
The old Star Trek series: now, there was a cast. . .

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

When I was in my early twenties, my favorite television show was Star Trek. I could hardly wait each week to hear the words, "Space -- the final frontier -- these are the voyages of the star ship Enterprise -- its mission is to explore strange new worlds -- to seek out new life and new civilizations -- to boldly go where no man has ever gone before!"

And what a cast! There was Captain Kirk, who wasn't afraid of anything in the entire universe (I remember that even my girlfriend had this incredible crush on him -- although she swore it was just because he had perfect posture); Spock, who could outwit any alien he came across with his dispassionate logic -- and if that didn't work, he would just casually snuff them out with one of his patented Vulcan death grips; Bones, the opinionated ship doctor who was continually trying to humanize Spock when he wasn't busy examining patients and coming up with these really complex medical diagnoses by simply scanning the critically ill with what looked like nothing more than a Remington electric razor; and of course, Scottie, who was always just precious moments away from running out of enough power to keep the Enterprise from blowing up or being trapped forever in some deep dark black hole in outer space. His character, by the way, also led to the best bumper sticker I've ever seen, which simply read, "Go ahead, Scottie--beam me up."

A few years ago, I tried real hard to get interested in Star Trek--The New Generation, but without a whole lot of success. The new captain was some old bald guy named Jean-Luc Picard and he just never seemed to have that confident air of absolute control (not to mention perfect posture) that Captain Kirk had when he stood on the deck shouting out orders to Chekov, Sulu and Uhura. Lavar Burton had a pretty good role as Geordi La Forge, but that weird looking thing they stuck around his eyes from ear to ear looked so ridiculous that it was hard to take anything he did very seriously. The best character by far on the new series was a Klingon named Lieutenant Worf, but for some reason the creators of the show decided to stick a big cow patty on his forehead with huge veins running all through it and I could never concentrate on what he was saying because I couldn't take my eyes off the darn thing.

Anyway, back when Star Trek was the biggest thing on television, I started to notice that some of my friends--and also an alarming number of complete strangers--thought I looked a little bit like Captain Kirk's loyal sidekick, Mr. Spock.

"It's the way you get your hair cut," my girlfriend finally told me one day. "Just don't let your barber cut off all the hair above your ears anymore."

"What are you saying?" I asked in amazement. "You don't actually think my ears look like Mr. Spock's, do you?"

"Well," she said reluctantly, "maybe--at times--just a little?"

"But Spock's ears are pointed," I exclaimed. "My ears aren't pointed."

"I know that," she tried to explain. "I didn't say your ears were pointed, now did I? Stop being so sensitive. It's just that--well--you have black hair like Spock--and you kinda cut it the same way he cuts his--and you have that same menacing eyebrow he has--and your ears are--well--you know--just a little prominent."

"You are too saying I look like Spock!" I shouted in disbelief.

"No, I'm not," she swore, "but even if I was, I happen to think that Mr. Spock is a very nice looking man. You should--well--you know--take it as a compliment."

"But Spock's not a man at all," I yelled. "He's a bloody Vulcan!"

A few weeks later, when I finally started talking to her again, she promised never to bring up my alleged resemblance to Mr. Spock in any of our future conversations, I started wearing my hair a little longer, and that was that--until last Thursday afternoon.

I had just had my hair cut earlier in the week and I was substitute teaching for Mike Shriver--the freshman history teacher over at River City High School. "They're a great bunch of kids," he had assured me. "They tell you exactly what's on their mind, and I think you're really going to like them."

And so I did, until fifth period rolled around and a couple of them casually strolled up to my desk and very politely asked if they could ask me a personal question.

"Sure," I said, a little worried. "What is it?"

"Well," said one of the freshmen with a straight face, "we were just kind of wondering if anyone has ever told you that you look just like that Mr. Spock guy--you know--that Vulcan dude in those Star Trek movies?"

"No," I lied, "no one ever has."

As I glared at them, they both broke out into a smile, spread the middle fingers of their right hands as far apart as they could and formally saluted me with Mr. Spock's famous hand signal. "Well, Mr. Fisher," said the braver of the two, "we just wanted to say--live long and prosper."

Low cost flu vaccinations for seniors available on Nov. 3, Nov. 16 locally

County health officials are encouraging people 60 years and older to take advantage of low-cost flu shot clinics this fall to protect themselves from influenza this winter.

Seniors are the principal target of the public flu campaign because if they catch the flu, it can get serious quickly.

The clinics also provide pneumonia and tetanus shots. Pneumovax is given one time only and is $8. Tetanus is given every ten years and is $10. Flu shots are $3.

The clinics will be offered twice in West Sacramento; one on Nov. 3 at Sam Coombs Activity Center, 205 Stone Blvd., between 1 and 3 p.m., and one on Nov. 16 at the West Sacramento Senior Center, 664 Cummins Way, between 1 and 3 p.m.

Guest commentary:

Sellers of violent games: have shame

By California Attorney General Daniel E. Lungren

Leading elements of the video game industry are heavily promoting their recently-released game, Mortal Kombat II. Maybe the video game industry knows something the rest of us don't, but the last time I checked, we weren't suffering from a shortage of violence in our society, particularly where it involves children.

Last year when I and others first raised the issue of video game violence and urged the industry to voluntarily change its conduct, the nationwide response from parents and civic groups -- as well as some retailers, news organizations, and event Hollywood personalities -- was tremendous. The video game industry promised us some changes, and, with great fanfare, announced a ratings system. Some of us worried then that some in the industry might cynically use a ratings system as a marketing tool to actually entice young people to violent games, or to use ratings as a fig leaf to justify new levels of gratuitous violence. Unfortunately, Mortal Kombat II proves us right.

GamePro Magazine points to the game's "gory fatalities such as Jax's arm puller, Kung Loa's hat split and Kitana's fan decapitation," proving that this game is even more violent than its predecessor.

In addition, key differences between the original Mortal Kombat and the sequel make the violence more accessible. Unlike the first game, there are no secret codes in Mortal Kombat II to deter children and less experienced players from accessing the full level of violent game imagery.

Furthermore, whereas industry leader Nintendo has refused to market the gory version of the first Mortal Kombat game over concern about its impact on young players, Nintendo's version of Mortal Kombat II comes complete with all the violent video game imagery of the game promoted by Sega, its chief competitor.

Californians ask me all the time if we can ever hope to reach a point at which we will be able to stop building more and more prisons to house ever greater numbers of violent criminals. My answer is we are going to have to keep doing just that unless and until we all reject the culture of violence which we have allowed to take root. This glorification of violence in video games, as well as in movies, musical lyrics, television, and sports plays a role in this, sending the worst possible message to our young people: that you can only be somebody by destroying another, that violence is not only the key to survival but the ticket to success. It has got to stop and those peddling Mortal Kombat II ought to be ashamed.

River City actors to produce 'Love Letters' in November

From the River City High School Thespian Troupe

After a series of West Coast premiers and other honors, the River City High School drama department has pulled off another coup. Director Roy S. Engoron wanted to do the play LOVE LETTERS, but rights to produce it by amateurs was not available. Engoron wrote directly to the playwright, A.R. Gurney, who allowed the forward-looking group to produce the play -- possibly the first high school in the state to do so. The play deals with the fifty-year relationship between Andy Ladd and Melissa Gardner. It combines the elements of a conventional play with those of a dramatic reading. After a long run both on and off Broadway, the play traveled all over the country, starring such noted actors as Jane Alexander, Jason Robards, Mariette Hartley, and Gurney himself. The River City production features Tony Venditti and Rhapsody Flores, and opens November 10 at the Yolo High School auditorium.

The NFL season is picking up momentum as the 49ers and Cowboys continue winning and head for the big showdown on November 13th in San Francisco.

The 49ers (5-2), remembering what it feels like to be embarrassed two weeks ago, turned the tables on Atlanta (4-3), whipping the Falcons 42-3. Steve Young was almost perfect on the day, throwing for four touchdowns and completing 15 of 16 passes for 143 yards, but Deion "Prime Time" Sanders stole the show again.

After exchanging blows with Andre Rison and picking up two 15 yard penalties, "Prime Time" intercepted a pass and returned it 93 yards for a touchdown and the 49ers never looked back.

The 49ers host Tampa Bay this weekend and then will have a bye in their schedule before they travel to Washington D.C. 49ers 38, Tampa Bay 6.

The Dallas Cowboys (5-1) continue to win as they beat the Eagles 24-13 and the Cowboys currently have the No. 1 defense in the NFL! The team to beat is still the undefeated San Diego Chargers (6-0), who will host the no-luck Denver Broncos (1-5). The Broncos lost on Monday night 31-28 against Kansas City, which was led by another famous Joe Montana last-second touchdown drive.

Eleven times the Chiefs had come into Mile High Stadium since 1982 and had gone home losers!

In a nerve-wracking finish that saw the lead change hands twice in the last two minutes, Joe Montana rallied to beat Elway's Broncos before 75,151 fans in Denver. Denver travels next week to play San Diego, while Kansas City goes home and waits for the Seahawks to land in Arrowhead Stadium. Kansas City 27, Seattle 17.

The Sacramento Gold Miners (7-7-1) took a major step backwards on Sunday, losing to the Shreveport Pirates in a rain storm that produced the Pirates' first victory of the season and the first win of their franchise history. The Gold Miners lost control of their own destiny in the hunt for the fourth playoff spot in the Western Division. Now the Gold Miners must win their last three games and hope Saskatchewan loses one of its final three games.

The Gold Miners play host to Ottawa (4-11) on Saturday, Oct. 22. Game time is 7:30 p.m. at Hornet Field.

See ya next week!!

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial

Public should reject fake, political newspapers

Fake newspapers: you've seen them. You've had them mailed to you or dropped on your driveway, usually shortly before an election.

These specifically-political newspapers can vary in their source. They can be produced by a campaign for a candidate, or by a special interest lobbying for some ballot proposal or other.

West Sacramento has seen its share of these papers, some of them more blatantly political than others.

One was started up locally to fight for city incorporation.

Another was started by development interests to fight against a development initiative. (It was mass-distributed, free of charge, in neighborhoods near that development for over a year -- a practice which ended one week after the initiative was voted on by local residents.)

Another was started to fight for a cardroom proposal, also scheduled for city ballot. Distributed free and featuring plenty of pro-cardroom articles and editorials, its owners denied being merely a pro-gaming publication. But it was nowhere to be found one week after the cardroom election faced local voters.

Local congressional candidates had a colorful exchange through fake newspapers during the last election.

Incumbent Vic Fazio's opponent, the conservative H.L. Richardson, put out a fake newspaper called the "Valley Messenger" some weeks before the election. The Valley Messenger looked like a real newspaper, but carried a noticeably one-sided view of things. It carried positive, worshipful articles on Richardson, nice photographs of him and an editorial endorsing him for Congress.

It also carried negative coverage of Fazio, including a grainy, out-of-focus and unflattering photo of him.

If you looked close enough, you would find that it wasn't a real newspaper at all, but a campaign piece produced by Richardson's people.

But Fazio's campaign had the last laugh. Several weeks after the first issue of the "Valley Messenger," his campaign put out their very own issue of the "Valley Messenger," reversing its content. They copied not only the name of Richardson's publication, but its type styles and format. And then they filled it with articles praising Fazio and condemning Richardson, even going so far as to apologize for factual errors which had come to light since the previous issue of the "Valley Messenger." Due to those factual mistakes, the new newspaper said, the editors were reversing their stand and endorsing Fazio instead of Richardson.

This was amusing, of course, although two wrongs still don't make a right: Fazio's "Valley Messenger," like Richardson's, was designed to fool people. Richardson didn't have a grievance, but the public did.

Naturally, any of those involved in producing these newspapers would deny trying to fool the public.

But if they're really trying to be up-front with the public, why put their name on it only in fine print? Why copy a newspaper's style, and then hide the fact of who is funding it, either through secrecy (as in the instances of the West Sacramento ballot measure newspapers) or by keeping it in fine print (as in the case of the congressional candidates' newspapers)?

All this comes to mind because a "Special Edition" of the "American Tribune" recently appeared around these parts. Presumably, it is a "special issue" because it is the only issue. The "American Tribune," as you can see from the small print at the bottom of page two (if you get that far), is paid for by the LeFever Campaign Fund. And Tim LeFever, who is touted in glowing terms by the "American Tribune," is Fazio's new opponent for the U.S. House of Representatives.

These newspapers are now a well accepted means of campaigning. But their purpose is to fool the ignorant. A well-informed voter base would do well to simply reject them out of hand. They are filled with one-sided propoganda under the guise of journalism.

The difference is that with a real newspaper, at least any mistakes and distortions are honest ones.

Letters to the Editor

Senator helps local schools district:

In your insightful edition on the recent State Senate candidates' debate between Mike McGowan and Maurice Johannessen, you asked how much one State Senator could do to solve a school bus funding problem in a single school district. The issue arose in the debate when Supervisor McGowan reported that the Williams School District had no money to bus its pupils home at the end of each day, and that Senator Johannessen had done nothing to fix this absurd problem.

Earlier this year, another legislator won $78,000 for two rural Southern California school districts which he represents -- for the specific purpose of assisting the districts with school transportation expenses -- in special legislation passed unanimously by the legislature and signed by Governor Wilson. Had Maurice Johannessen done the same for his constituents, families in the Williams School District could be assured that their children would have a ride home from school each day. Partisanship is no excuse; like Johannessen, the effective legislator who helped the two Southern California school districts is a Republican.

As the candidates' debate made quite clear, extremist demagoguery doesn't solve problems.

CHRISTOPHER CABALDON

To LeFever:

Open letter to Tim LeFever, congressional candidate:

We, the undersigned citizens of the area, are appalled that you signed this "Contract on America" that calls for cutting the Social Security and Medicare every older American has worked so hard to earn. We are even further amazed that you would have the nerve to conduct a bus tour to tout how much you love this contract.

Your "Contract on America" was dreamed up by the Republican leadership in Congress -- the same people who blocked real change and said no on everything from health care to campaign finance reform. Even more disturbing is that special interest, fat-cat lobbyists paid thousands of dollars to put their own provisions in your contract. And after you signed the contract, you went to the fancy black-tie gala that night to pick up your own check as a pay-off for signing on their dotted line.

A congressional representative should get their direction on what to do from the people at home in their district -- not from the Republican leadership, or Washington special-interest lobbyists.

What the people of this area are telling you is we do not want Social Security or Medicare slashed. We do not want to go back to the 1980's, where the rich got richer and the rest of us got trickled on.

We therefore demand that you turn your bus around now, and head back to Washington to remove your name from this "Contract on America."

PATRICIA MURRAY,
(and five other Yolo/Solano County residentswhose names are on file)

Last Tuesday evening Ray Russell on his way home from Sacramento was accosted on the bridge by two hoboes who asked him for money. Refusing them Ray was forced to stand some abuse, which he resented, knocking one of the tramps off the sidewalk and beating up the other considerably who wanted to fight. Ladies returning from Sacramento should be very careful from now on because these tramps are going to take advantage of the fact that many good men are out of work who can be blamed for petty annoyances and much begging. If possible ladies crossing the bridge after 10 o'clock at night should be accompanied by escorts. It is a blessing to think that the first pair who attempted anything of this kind got what they deserved from Ray Russell.

Howard Lee closed his store at Third and Ann streets last Tuesday and it was immediately taken over by the Wholesale Credit Association of Sacramento. Lee has secured a position in San Francisco. A purchaser for the store has been examining the location and the premises with the possibility that it may be taken over as it stands and conducted so as to draw more trade.

A little Japanese woman wandered away from her home north of town last Tuesday because she had a row with her father-in-law. Her relatives, knowing of the trouble, believed she had committed suicide and had the river dragged for several hours in the vicinity of her home. Becoming tired on the road she was picked up by a white man who turned her over to the Japanese colony at Clarksburg and she has been returned here to her husband and children without mishap.

PURNELL SOLUTION OF THE NORTHERN TRAFFIC QUESTION INTO SACRAMENTO IS GOOD

The solution offered by W. F. Purnell and published in the Sacramento Union a few days ago, solving the question of traffic into the city of Sacramento from the north is very worthy of consideration.

Mr. Purnell would divert traffic from the Natomas District to a bridge over the Sacramento river at Riverbank or Bryte Bend, thus relieving, to a great extent, the congestion at the 12th street subway.

There no doubt but that something must be done to help the subway question. At that point there is danger to life and limb and there is great danger that any addition of the traffic will effectually block the subway.

But Mr. Purnell must bear in mind that the people of Yolo County, at great expense and after many years of weary waiting, have just been able to secure a good roadway between Riverbank and Washington.

They certainly would not look with favor on the diverting of much trucking from Natomas District over this road, although they may subsequently become reconciled to it because of increased values for property of the neighborhood.

Mr. Purnell in his article comments as follows:

But few Sacramentans know that from the neighboring town of Broderick to the town of Riverbank there is three miles of the finest highway in the State. This roadway leads in to the city over the Southern Pacific bridge and as the approach is from the north, there are no tracks to cross either on the Yolo or Sacramento County sides.

By building a bridge across the Sacramento at Bryte Bend bypass there would be no approaches to construct, as there are already permanent highways constructed at bridge level on both sides of the river.

I give in connection with the map a table of distances from the suggested bridge to various unloading points within the city proper. Second and I is near to all rail and water shipping points; Sixth and G is the delivery point for one of our many canneries, and Twelfth and B our largest flour mill.

The coming method of agricultural hauling is to be the motor truck and in the saving of distance much is accomplished. The difference in distance from the Bryte Bend bridge via Riverbank and from the same point via the Natomas boulevard to the freight depot is 4.2 miles or 8.4 miles for the round trip, and when you realize the cost of the return trip of an empty truck is about 85 per cent of the cost of the trip of a loaded truck it is very apparent the saving in distance is a great ecenomy.

The cost of a draw bridge for motor vehicles alone would not approach the cost of either of the present Sacramento bridges, and as the reclamation projects to the north of us develop, the farming becomes more intensive and the settlers increase, the prompt delivery of produce will figure large in the success of all concerned.

WED IN SAN FRANCISCO ON SEPT. 28

On Wednesday, September 28th, Mrs. Belle Porter and H. Davis, both residents of Washington, were married in San Francisco by Superior Judge Troutt.

This wedding was not unanticipated for lately the contracting parties were in each others company noticeably.

Last Saturday they returned from their honeymoon and are now making their home on Second Street where Mrs. Porter resided for several years past.

The Davis home on Front Street was rented a few days ago to N. Nelson, who came to make his permanent residence in Washington.

Mr. Davis is in the employ of the Southern Pacific Co., and at the present time is in charge of the Southern Pacific bridge during daylight hours.

A Woodland preacher complains that he cannot send his boys to the State University because an entrance fee of $25 is charged.

Many a hard-working man in Yolo County doesn't dream of sending his boys to the university.

But then there is a difference between a preacher and a hard worker.

RAID OF FEDERAL OFFICERS RETURNED VERY LITTLE JACKASS

Last Wednesday eight or ten prohibition enforcement officers raided the three saloons of Washington and for their trouble got two ounces of brandy at the Hoffman saloon.

The proprietor of the place, J. Nevelli, was placed under arrest and permitted his liberty under $500 bonds placed with U. S. Commissioner Wallace Shepard in Sacramento.

None of the other places in Washington were found to have in their possession anything of an intoxicating character stronger than nearbeer.

Saloonmen should be careful during sessions of the Federal Court in Sacramento because during the sessions arresting officers are forced to be in attendance to testify against those who have been indicted.

Novelli has never before been in trouble and has carefully avoided the sale of intoxicants. His record is very good, but two ounces of intoxicants is as big as a barrel full in the eyes of the enforcement officers.

MONUMENT BONDS SOLD ABOVE PAR

Woodland, Oct. 4.—Two bids for the purchase of the Monument school district bonds were submitted to the supervisors and opened at three o'clock September 3rd. The bid of Blythe, Witter & Co., for $15,020.00 with accrued interest, was the highest bid and the bonds were sold to that firm. The Bank of Woodland was the other bidder, its tender being for par and accrued interest.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Buckingham have gone to San Francisco for a visit.

The Sunbeam Club is scheduled to meet to-night at the home of Margaret Mosers at 7 o''c'l'oc'k'.

Mrs. Robert Kaili of 426 First Street was treated at the Emergency Hospital in Sacramento last Monday morning after she had taken a dose of lysol. Neighbors stated that the woman's attempt at suicide followed a quarrel with her husband. She will recover.

Mrs. Ruth Eddy of Monument was a visitor last Wednesday, visiting with friends here.

The regular meeting of the Parent-Teacher Association, which was to have been held Thursday, has been postponed until October 20th.

Mrs. H. B. Buckingham is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Elmer Johnson, at the home of the latter in Stockton.

Mrs. A. A. Dassonville has returned from a week-end visit in San Francisco.

Mrs. D. Gregory cut her wrist painfully in a fall at her home last Monday.

County Tax Collector R. W. Woods was assisted in observing his birthday last Sunday in Woodland by several friends from out of town, including Captain and Mrs. George Forsman of the California Transportation Co., and W. N. Woods of Washington, a brother to Mr. Woods. A delightful birthday dinner with all the trimmings and fixin's was served by Mrs. Edna Woods in the county building.

SERIOUS WRECK MAY HELP SOLVE ROAD ROUTE

A head-on collision between two automobiles at Fifth and Ann Streets last Wednesday afternoon very nearly resulted in a fatality.

Two touring cars met at the sharp turn south of the railroad tracks and in passing their front wheels interlocked, smashing both cars very badly and injuring a lady on the east bound car.

The lady occupied a rear seat in the automobile and was thrown through the windshield when the collision occurred. Her upper lip and chin were badly cut but fortunately her eyes were saved from coming in contact with the hard roadway when she threw out her hands to save herself.

She was given first-aid at a neighboring house and was later taken to Sacramento for medical attention.

Neither one of the cars were being driven at more than fifteen miles an hour, but it is almost impossible to avoid trouble at this corner.

Scarcely a day passes that a wreck does not occur at this point. The roadway is narrow at the sharp turn and to strangers it is very confusing, because they believe that the road proceeds over the railroad tracks when approaching from the southern side.

Again, there is a high embankment at the southern side of the highway which was left when the Southern Pacific Co. placed its embankment and failed to fill the entire width of the street. There is also a large telegraph pole on the southern side of the road which is really a redeeming feature because it warns auto drivers to be careful.

In last week's Independent a story was published advising that a conference will be held on October 19th between the Yolo Board of Supervisors and the State Highway Commission in an effort to solve a fitting and proper entrance to Sacramento from the west.

The conference proposal was brought about by the announcement that the county highway from the north to the end of the bridge was about to be built north of the Southern Pacific tracks.

Should two roads leading to the bridge be finished there would be a costly duplication which should be avoided or else if two roads are necessary they should be removed to streets more widely separated than Ann and Elizabeth streets.

Many interested property owners are advocating that the State highway should be built along Mary Street, from Fifth to Third, and from that point to the incline of the Southern Pacific bridge.

In that locality there are no grades to overcome and no sharp turns like that at Fifth and Ann Streets, but there still will be left the railroad crossing at Third Street, where a watchman is always maintained.

JUDGE BARRY SUFFERED SEVERELY FOR FEW DAYS

Township Justice J. D. Barry has been seriously sick during several days of the past week suffering with high blood pressure. Last Monday he was forced to consult a physician who administered to his wants.

Yesterday he was greatly improved, being able to be around his home again and to attend to his official duties.

Police log

Oct. 11, 11:55 p.m.

A 38-year old transient man went to his ex-wife's home on Merkley Ave. and became agitated. He is said to have grabbed her by the throat with one hand and begun striking her in the face with the other hand. She sustained a possibly broken nose and a cut lip, and was bleeding profusely when police arrived. The man was arrested for parole violation.

Oct. 12, 3:35 p.m.

At a Simon Terrace apartment, a 20 year old man choked his 18 year old brother, punched his 17 year old sister, and pushed his mother against a wall, injuring her. SEWAGE from page 1

West Sacramento, in a lawsuit this year by the International Sport Fisherman's Alliance, which was concerned about the plant's discharges into the Sacramento River. Klever's name has since been dropped from the defendants' list in that lawsuit.

The plant has been was fined $250,000 for violations -- primarily in its reporting requirements -- earlier this year, and has picked up a total of over $340,000 in state fines over the past several years.

Meanwhile, problems at the plant continue.

The state Regional Water Quality Control Board informed city manager Joe Goeden Oct. 5 that its staff would present an informational item to the board continuing West Sacramento's continuing sewage violations.

"Since their last fine in June, they have had 75 violations of various limits," said Richard McHenry, who inspects the plant on behalf of the state board. "We will be taking an informational item before the board at 4:00 o'clock on Oct. 27."

That meeting will take place at the Integrated Waste Management Board, 8800 Cal Center Dr. in Sacramento.

McHenry said that the violations include excess chlorine residue in the treated sewage, excess levels of coliform bacteria (an indicator of untreated fecal matter), violations of pH standards, and excess "settlable solids."

"The coliform and chlorine residual problems can be related to the disinfection system the city installed this past summer," McHenry continued. The pH problems (relating to acidity) can be attributed to industrial discharges."

McHenry said he didn't know who was running the plant in Klever's absence. He said a "Grade 5" license is required for a superintendent.

"As I understand it, the city has Grade 2 operators only."

As a result of the state's enforcement actions, West Sacramento invested in two major new treatment systems earlier this year which were supposed to alleviate the treatment problems.

The actual sewage treatment process was switched over to a "nitrification" process, which McHenry said is supposed to be "more stable" and less prone to upsets from unwanted chemicals in West Sacramento's highly industrial waste stream.

A new chlorination and dechlorination system was also installed. The liquid wastes are chlorinated to kill organisms before being discharged into the Sacramento River, and then dechlorinated because the chlorine itself is a pollutant.

In a May 31 letter, the city's consultant on the project, CH2M Hill, presented its opinion that the new systems would be adequate for the task. But the violations have continued.

The state is also taking West Sacramento to task for not having its industrial pre-treatment program fully up an running. That program is designed to make sure that the wastes leaving local businesses are acceptable in the first place, before they ever get to the sewage plant on South River Road.

McHenry said it will be difficult to judge whether the new training and equipment at the plant are doing their job. The sewage violations, for a reason never pinned down by city officials, have tended to occur only in the summer. They may naturally cease by themselves as fall arrives.

"Right now, we should be going into the city's typical season of compliance," he stated.

West Sacramento are considering a radical solution to their sewage plant problems. They recently voted to fund a $20,000 study to explore the feasibility of paying Sacramento County to treat the city's sewage at the Elk Grove treatment plant.

The other option being explored is the construction of a new West Sacramento sewage plant, to be located near the south end of the city.

scheme that Chief Al Gore hopes will boost morale and make the vehicles more recognizable, without looking like the Highway Patrol.

The front of rear of the vehicles are black, as are the words "West Sacramento" on the door area. The stripes and word "Police" are red.

The old paint scheme, still featured on most of the department's fleet, used a magenta-and-white color scheme.
